POSTKARTE.

By Appointment.

Lincluden Abbey was founded early in the 12th century by Uchtred, Lord of Galloway, as a convent for Benedictine nuns, but was eventually broken up and a college substituted by Archibald the Grim, Earl of Douglas. The present structure dates chiefly from the 14th to 16th centuries, and is of florid French architecture. It was a favourite haunt of Burns, who, according to Allan Cunningham, here beheld "the vision."
